- Fire Luminous Orange
- Earth Prosperous Green
- Water Serene Blue
- Air Pure White
- Sky Light Blue

Ever since the first houses to big machines, humans have always tried to find out what makes up everything- the trees, the flowers, the rivers and of course, the human body.

Great old thinkers with great old beards and big old brains gave many ideas but one which came to be talked about is the idea of the five great elements. An element is something which makes up other things and it is believed that everything on this earth is made up of these five elements- fire, earth, water, air and the sky. And each element represents not just an outer cover but also links with the inner soul of any being.

Fire is bright, passionate, creative and gives light. Water is cool, tranquil and peaceful. Air is fast and swift, it is powerful but tender. The Earth is humble, quiet, solid and dependable. The Sky is endless, mysterious and full of imagination. All around the round world, there are different notions of colour for the elements but in a broad sense, the colours stand as follows: Fire being a luminous orange; Earth a prosperous green, Water a serene blue, Air a pure white and Sky a light blue.

All five have some unique qualities that give them their identities and each element has something which strikes a chord with the inner self. So go ahead and realise yourself.
